We are looking forward to your child participating in our program. Preschool playtime activities are essential in an environment where children are introduced to various cognitive skills and simple concepts, developing social and physical skills as well as promoting language development. Play enhances social interaction and the development of social skills. Through play the children learn how to share and get along with each other. They learn to take turns and to interact with others in a larger community or family setting. Play also promotes physical development and one's ability to coordinate one's body while in motion and may also help promote small and large muscle motor development. Play also assists in personal and emotional development since children can take on different roles in the class, release feelings, express themselves and learn how consider the feelings of others.

Your child will participate in a variety of different types of learning and playtime experiences. We do not guarantee that because your child has been actively involved in the preschool program that he or she will have learned everything that has been introduced to them during the course of the school year.

The majority of parents will need to complete a total of nine forms. If you marked "yes" on one or more of the boxes on page two of your child's enrollment and health information (page 2), you will need to complete either and or both forms JFS 01217 and JFS 01236.

The forms need to be completed and returned to me by August 20, 2022. Parents of preschoolers who attended preschool last year need to fill the forms out again for this coming school year.

Parents, please make sure you fill out each form completely, especially the Emergency Transportation Form and Child Medical Forms. All names, addresses and phone numbers must be filled out completely on each of the forms.

Preschool age children are learning so much in such a short amount of time. May we as parents and teachers not forget to allow them to enjoy these precious years.

Love in Christ,
